PMP Certification Course Instructors

Michael Staley, PMP
As Provost of the Center for Economic Development at Heathrow and the Dean of the School of Engineering, Design and Construction at Seminole State College, Mr. Staley has transformed his significant project management experience into Project Management Education. A PMP-credentialed instructor, Mr. Staley has over 20 years in Corporate America managing a vast array of projects ranging in size from $25,000 to $25+ million. Many of these projects were part of complex programs and key implementations for aerospace and technology clients. In addition, he earned his master’s degree in business administration and two bachelor degrees (in engineering and mathematics). His vast experience in the field coupled with his formal education make him a powerful instructor. He began teaching at the community college level in 1999.

John Tracy, MBA, MS-MIS, PMP
With over 30 years’ experience in software development, Mr. Tracy has managed over 100 major projects for national and international corporations. In the private sector, his responsibilities have ranged from software developer and development manager to project manager and project/program director, managing over $200 million in software projects annually. In the public sector, John has served as Chief Information Officer of a very large school district. He has also done senior level PM consulting work for public and private sector clients both domestically and internationally. Over the past 12 years, he has developed and delivered online and traditional project management training for educational and public institutions as well as private corporations. Mr. Tracy holds Masters Degrees in Business Administration and Management Information Systems, has held continuous PMP certification since 1998, and is currently engaged in developing and delivering project management courseware and senior level consulting.

Additional lecturers are employed as project management professionals and are experts in their respective fields.
